Poets trace their steps in ink. We all carry our burdens and fears, hopes and dreams with us daily to remind us we are human. A Poet's Handbag is simply a compilation of life bringing back to memory those forgotten moments, giving a voice to society's struggles and bringing us face to face with our own reality. ~Anna Marie

My mother's old leather handbag, crowded with letters she carried all through the war. The smell of my mother's handbag: mints and lipstick and Coty powder. The look of those letters, softened and worn at the edges, opened, read, and refolded so often. Letters from my father. Odour of leather and powder, which ever since then has meant womanliness, and love, and anguish, and war.
