Low-emissivity windows. Window glass is by nature highly thermally emissive, as indicated in the table above. To improve thermal control (insulation and solar optical properties) thin film coatings are applied to the raw soda-lime glass. There are two primary methods in use: pyrolytic chemical vapor deposition and magnetron sputtering. The first involves deposition of fluorinated tin dioxide

Binders - Film formers, such as natural resins and drying oils, and synthetic resins are normally blended with solvents to form the coating vehicle. When dried or cured, they hold the elements of the film and adhere to the substrate. The film formers, or binders are largely responsible for the physical properties and the resistance to degradation by the environment or during use.

Glass container production Glass container factories. Broadly, modern glass container factories are three-part operations: the batch house, the hot end, and the cold end. The batch house handles the raw materials; the hot end handles the manufacture proper—the forehearth, annealing ovens, and forming machines; and the cold end handles the product-inspection and packaging equipment.

D avid Vermeulen, the Midwest territory manager for Technical Glass Products, spends a lot of time talking with Building Teams about impact glazing and fire-rated glass. "There's still a little confusion about the products—on the types of glass available, how they've changed over the years, and how they can be used," he says.
