If you peek inside my cupboards, you'll see countless little jars of herb and honey concoctions that are both delicious and healing. Making herb-infused honey has become one of my favorite ways to use leftover sprigs of thyme from cooking dinner, a handful of wild mint found while foraging, or the buds of an edible flower bouquet.

Because of the honey mustard in the marinade, I pour a bit of broth in the roasting pan. Honey mustard tends to over caramelize due to the sugar content in the mustard. You can add extra broth or water to the pan if needed. Place the pork loin roast in the oven and cook on high temperature (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for 15 minutes.

I think the only dried herb I'd try would be maybe wild rose? But even then...I probably wouldn't. Using fresh herbs allows you to harness much more medicine, flavour and magic. A good rule of thumb is a 1 parts herb to 12 parts honey for a cold infusion and 1 part herb to 5 parts honey for a warm infusion. You want more honey in a cold ...
